Escherichia coli	FCHD534	B-21459

Furthermore, insofar as is practicable in carrying out the business of the Department of Agriculture, we shall refrain from distributing progeny of these strains pending the issuance of the U.S. Patent to your company, with the exceptions, however, that: (1) Access to the progeny of these strains by other parties will be granted upon receipt of written authorization from your company specifying the name and Agricultural Research Service Culture Collection (NRRL) designation (NRRL number) of the strain and identifying the party who is to receive it; (2) with reference to 886 O.G. 638 progeny of these strains will be available during pendency of the patent application to one determined by the Commissioner of Patents to be entitled thereto under 37 CFR 1.14 of the Rules of Practice in Patent Cases and 35 U.S.C. 122; and (3) access to progeny of these strains shall also be granted under the conditions as stated in rule 11 (11.1, 11.2, and 11.3) of the Budapest Treaty. All restrictions on the availability of progeny of the strains to the public will be irrevocably removed upon the granting of the U.S. Patent(s) of which the strains are the subject. The strains will be maintained for a period of at least 5 years after the most recent request for the furnishing of a sample of the deposited microorganism by the Agricultural Research Service Culture Collection and, in any case, for a period of at least 30 years after the date of the deposit. During this period all care necessary shall be taken to keep these strains viable and uncontaminated.

Mr. S. L. Misrock
